NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The wide-spread character of equinoctial hurricanes and storms, which have been so common of late years, is illustrated by the gale which has been raging for the past two days on the Atlantic coast, and which will probably amount to the most disastrous storm of the season. The storm appears to have commenced on the coast of Florida, and to have swept northward, with increasing violence, to the coast of the Carolinas, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Long Island, and Southern New England. The storm has been severest on the coast of New Jersey, and the property loss there will probably amount to the

RANK BURSTING EXTRAORDINARY.

Immense Robbery at the Bank of Norwalk, Conn.—The Vault and Safes Blown Open—A Haul of Over $150,000.

From the New York Herald, Oct. 5.

Early yesterday morning, as some laborers at Norwalk, Fairfield county, were about crossing the Connecticut a couple of tin cash boxes in the street and which some papers lying around. These excited inquiry, which resulted in the discovery that the Norwalk Bank, on the corner of Norwalk and Main streets, had been robbed.

When your reporter arrived at the bank there was quite a crowd assembled, but none were allowed except those who were on business. A Herald reporter was among the first to enter, and on the safes, and found Mr. J. M. Tilley, of the New York detective police, making a survey of the premises.

The bank is a brick building, with a handsome brown stone front, situated on the south side of the principal street of the town, adjoining and near the new depot of the Danbury & Norwalk Railroad.

The basement of the bank and the rooms above are rented by different parties. The robbers, it appears, must have entered the bank by breaking open a front door in the rear, which was only secured by a common lock, though this was cleverly concealed, as the door was painted.

From the appearance of the premises it was thought that they must have entered by the front door by means of false keys, locking the door behind them. They then went to the rear, broke open the door and the "burglar's" must have been a comparatively easy matter.

The robbers, it is supposed, must have entered the bank on Saturday night, and commenced operations at once. They had ample time to do their work before the opening, say seriously affect the success of the robbery, as the bank does not open on Monday morning before ten o'clock.

The burglars, it appears, first attacked the safe containing the funds belonging to the Norwalk Savings Institution. This safe was a small one, and they had no difficulty in blowing it open. They then proceeded to the vault, which contained the funds of the bank and the private deposits of the bankers. This vault was a large one, and the safes which it contained were of the most approved construction. The robbers, however, succeeded in blowing open the doors of the vault, though this was chiefly considered as the safes resisted the powder.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

ATTENTION.

A flourishing manufacturing business, established for over four years, offers for sale, on favorable terms, a perfect success, desire to turn their attention to other business. Will bear the most rigid investigation. Address Manufacturing Stock Company, for the following reasons, which will be explained to any one desiring to purchase: Have not time to attend to it, and have other business which will make it necessary, in order to keep with their own establishment of this kind, to invest a larger capital than they have now at their disposal, for the purpose of obtaining all the late improved machinery and its appurtenances.

This may be considered a rare chance for capitalists or practical men, as the business is in a prosperous condition, and the profits are large.

Parties desiring to engage in the manufacture of Stock Goods will find this a rare opportunity.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 4.

The Wisconsin State Fair, after a week of unusual success, which every thing combined to make the most complete, closed this afternoon. The attendance has been very large from the first, and the receipts have been more than double those of any previous year. The exhibition of stock has been unusually fine, and the display of machinery and manufactures has been very full and complete. The weather has been delightful, with the exception of the first day, which was rainy, and the roads have been in excellent condition. The first day was the occasion of a considerable disappointment to many visitors, who were expecting to see the President and Mrs. Grant, who had been announced to be present. The President, however, was unable to leave Washington, and Mrs. Grant, who was to have accompanied him, was detained by the illness of her father. Gen. Sheridan, who was to have been present on the first day, was unable to reach here in time, but arrived on the second day, and was received with great enthusiasm by the crowds of people who had come in from the country. He was escorted to the Capitol, where he was welcomed by Governor Fairchild, and addressed the people from the steps of the building. He was followed by Senator Carpenter, who also made a speech. The addresses of both these gentlemen were received with great applause, and were full of patriotic sentiments. Gen. Sheridan's speech was brief, but was full of humor, and was very well received. Senator Carpenter's address was a very able one, and was listened to with great attention. He spoke of the progress of the country, and of the duty of the people to maintain the honor of the nation. He said that the country was now at peace with all the world, and that the people were prosperous and happy. He thought that the time had come when the nation could afford to pay off its debt, and that it was the duty of the people to do so. He was followed by Governor Fairchild, who welcomed the visitors to the State, and spoke of the prosperity of Wisconsin. He said that the State was now free from debt, and that the people were willing to pay their taxes. He was followed by Mr. Hoyt, of Milwaukee, who spoke of the resources of the State, and of the duty of the people to develop them. He was followed by Mr. Hall, of Milwaukee, who spoke of the duty of the people to maintain the honor of the nation. He was followed by Mr. Hoyt, of Milwaukee, who spoke of the duty of the people to maintain the honor of the nation
